

"BONDWOMEN" KLEINE
A SCENE FROM "BONDWOMEN," THE BIG KLEINE FEATURE WITH MAUDE FEALY, THE SALT LAKE STOCK ACTRESS AS ITS STAR. IT WILL HEAD THE PROGRAM AT THE REX THEATRE ON NEXT TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY.

Dr. Cook writes that he nearly froze to death climbing Mt. Everest. We had no idea winter had set in so early in Brooklyn.—Columbia State.

The conversation in the lobby of a hotel the other night turned to the question of bad guesses, when this story was told:

Smith was rambling around the waiting room of a big railroad terminal one afternoon when he saw a woman walk over to a lonely-looking man and ask him to hold her baby while she went to a store on the street level.

"That trick is an old one," said the wise Smith, going over to the lonely looking man. "You will never see mother dear any more."

"You have made a bad guess this time, old man," smiled the lonely man. "She will come back, all right."

"She will, eh?" returned Smith, who was sure of his ground. "What makes you think she will come back?"

"She is my wife," smiled the other.

"and this is our baby."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

A Woman Said

"For Comfort, a Redfern is the only corset to wear. No matter how many hours a day it is worn, it never fatigues—allows me perfect freedom, and I scarcely realize I have it on."

THE PURPOSE OF THE MODERN CORSET
IS TO SHAPE, SUPPORT AND NOT TO BIND
